PUBLIC ARTWORK

-  'THE PIPES' by Ramus
At the thresholds to Prahran Square, The Pipes is an invitation to experience an expansive clearing. Composing light, movement and environmental sounds into an atmosphere of call and response, the work creates a new space of belonging. A site-specific visual and audio installation co-designed by Ramus and Material Thinking, in collaboration with Lyons Architects.
-  'RING FORM 1&2 by' Jamie North
Ringform 1 and 2 are 'living' sculptures, which represent the artist's deep interest in the intersection of the natural world and the man-made. The architectural rings have firstly been embedded with materials that the artist has sourced from industrial sites, and then softened by the cultivation and integration of Australian native plants, which continue to grow and evolve over time.
-  'MURNALONG' by Fiona Foley
murnalong celebrates bees for their significance in our global ecosystem. Its title 'murnalong' is a local Indigenous Boon Wurrung word meaning bee. Throughout her practice the artist highlights commonalities across cultures. Historically an important food source for Indigenous Australians, bees remain crucially important to our shared future.

CHILDRENS PLAY EQUIPMENT

-  'GREEN MACHINE'
